Governing Law for Law School

The governing law for law school is primarily found in the American Bar Association's (ABA) Standards for Legal Education. These standards set forth the minimum requirements for law schools in the United States, and they cover a wide range of topics, including curriculum, faculty, and student services. In addition to the ABA's standards, law schools are also subject to the laws of the state in which they are located. These laws may vary from state to state, but they generally cover such matters as admissions, tuition, and academic standards.
