

Project Semicolon: Your Story Isn't Over

Project Semicolon is a movement dedicated to preventing suicide. The semicolon represents a pause in a sentence, not the end. It symbolizes the choice to keep living.

The movement was started in 2013 by Amy Bleuel, a young woman who lost her father to suicide. Bleuel was inspired to start the project after seeing a semicolon tattoo on the wrist of a friend who had also lost a loved one to suicide. The semicolon tattoo has since become a symbol of hope and solidarity for those who have been affected by suicide.

Project Semicolon has a number of goals, including:

- Raising awareness of suicide prevention
- Providing support to those who have been affected by suicide
- Encouraging people to seek help if they are struggling with suicidal thoughts

- Challenging the stigma surrounding suicide

Project Semicolon has a number of programs and initiatives to help achieve these goals. These include:

- The Semicolon Project website, which provides information on suicide prevention, support groups, and other resources
- The Semicolon Project blog, which features stories from people who have been affected by suicide
- The Semicolon Project social media campaign, which uses the hashtag #semicolonproject to raise awareness of suicide prevention
- The Semicolon Project school program, which provides educational resources on suicide prevention to schools and youth groups
- The Semicolon Project community outreach program, which provides support to local communities affected by suicide

Project Semicolon has made a significant impact on the lives of many people. The movement has helped to raise awareness of suicide prevention, provide support to those who have been affected by suicide, and encourage people to seek help if they are struggling with suicidal thoughts. Project Semicolon is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope.

If you or someone you know is struggling with suicidal thoughts, please reach out for help. There are many resources available, and you are not alone.
