The novel's protagonist is Hana, a young Canadian nurse who is assigned to care for the severely burned English patient. As she tends to his wounds, Hana learns about his extraordinary life and the tragic love story that led to his injuries.

The English patient is Count Laszlo de Almásy, a Hungarian aristocrat and explorer. In the years leading up to the war, he led a series of expeditions into the Sahara Desert, where he discovered a lost city and fell in love with a beautiful Bedouin woman named Katharine Clifton.

Katharine was married to a British army officer, but she and Almásy began a passionate affair. Their love affair was doomed from the start, however, and it ended tragically when Katharine was killed in a plane crash.

After Katharine's death, Almásy was badly burned in a plane crash of his own. He was rescued by the Germans and taken to the Italian villa where Hana is now caring for him.

As Hana listens to Almásy's story, she begins to fall in love with him herself. She is drawn to his intelligence, his courage, and his tragic past. Almásy, in turn, is drawn to Hana's kindness and compassion.

However, their love is forbidden. Hana is engaged to another man, and Almásy is dying. Despite the obstacles, Hana and Almásy continue to love each other until the very end.

The English Patient is a beautifully written and deeply moving novel about love, loss, and redemption. It is a story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
